PROFILE

I am a highly organized, versatile, and efficient person, capable of adapting to any work environment and task. My main strengths at work are: problem solving, self-teaching, independence, creativity, critical thinking, time-management, and ability to meet deadlines. I work best in an international human rights environment, given both my multilingual skills and my personal commitment for civil and social rights.

Before working for Humanists International, I studied Philosophy for nine years addressing the ethical issues emerging from God's death and Grand Narratives' end, working from a rationalist, secular, and liberal perspective. I improved my French and German skills studying in France (Paris, Aix-en-Provence), Germany (Düsseldorf, Munich), and Belgium (Brussels) with different academic scholarships (DAAD, WBI, Erasmus).

I published more than 40 essays with ISBN in English, French, and Italian, including a book on "Atheism and Philosophy without Gibberish" (Nessun Dogma, 2018). As a specialist of Albert Camus' works I attended 13 conferences in the UK and France. Since 2012 I am the Social Media Manager of the Société des Études Camussiennes.

Since 2013 I am an active volunteer of UAAR, the Italian Union of Rationalist Atheists and Agnostics, on behalf of which I wrote many articles on secular issues, I attended three events of the Young Humanists International, and I coordinated a project for the production of merchandise.
